Confirmed Proof

Residents of Norway Cannot Doubt What Has Been Twice Proved.

In gratitude for complete relief from aches and pains of bad backs—from distressing kidney ills—thousands have publicly recommended Doan's Kidney Pills. Residents of this vicinity who so testified years ago, now say the results were permanent. This testimony doubly proves the worth of Doan's Kidney Pills to Norway kidney sufferers.

Mrs. Georgia Toayer, Pleasant St., South Paris, Me., says: "The public statement I made several years ago regarding Doan's Kidney Pills, still holds good. I am glad to confirm it. This remedy helped me when I was suffering from kidney trouble. I advise other people who have kidney complaint to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Doctors Said He Had Dropsy.

Some time ago I had an attack of dropsy which finally settled in my kidneys and bladder. I doctored with the doctors and they claimed I had dropsy. I tried other remedies and got no relief from any of them. My condition was such that I was unable to work for about two months and the annoying symptoms caused me a great deal of trouble and pain. I was hardly able to turn over in bed. Seeing one of your Almanacs, I decided to give Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root a trial and after taking several bottles was able to resume my work again. I cannot say too much in praise of your Swamp-Root as the results in my case were truly wonderful.

Yours very truly, ROBERT BALLARD, Mansfield, Pa.

Sworn and subscribed before me, this 7th day of May, 1912.

RAY O. LONGBOOTHUM, Notary Public.

Letter to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

Prove What Swamp-Root Will Do For You

A Reply to "Tell Us How."

In Advertiser of June 27. Looking over the Advertiser for a word of news concerning the little poem "Tell Us How." To my vision beams clear.

As I read it over and over I am so full of sadness. That my heart was very sore and I now reply with gladness.

It is true a word that's spoken can never be unsaid. Also true that reparation is not made by the dead.

For did not our blessed Saviour So very many years ago Promise help and peace and comfort For each and every woe?

No life is wholly ruined Though its soiled with many a stain. For his love and kindness Longs to make it whole again.

When we think how he forgives us, Makes our sin as white as snow. Oh my friend forget the terrors, Drop them now and let them go.

If we ask are forgiven Let us not brood over the past, God has promised he will help us. Makes our sin as white as snow.

Help the sinful, help the weary God will fill your heart with love So you will be steadily walking On the firm ground above.

The Deceitful Mirror.

Grace Margaret Gould, the Fashion Editor of the Woman's Home Companion, contributed an article to the September number of that periodical. "The Deceitful Mirror" shows how some women are so intent on being stylish that the mirror is not of the slightest use to them. Although they look into the mirror, they do not see anything there except their desires. In other words, they refuse to believe the mirror. The following is her account of how some women regard the reflection of themselves in the mirror:

"Sometimes I think that the mirror has a special grudge against the roly-poly fat woman. She starts out with every intention of buying a plain, simple little dress, but the saleslady announces that draperies are the correct thing, that everyone is wearing the draped skirt, and why not she?"

"So she decides to and of course it is the fussiest of all the draped models; but she gazes at herself in the mirror with distinct joy. She knows it is the style and the mirror tells her that she is the style. Here again she only sees what she wants to see."

"In reality she is gazing at what appears to be a bundle of clothes—a movable, funny, stuffed-out bundle, but she doesn't see it, nor the fact that she looks shorter and fatter than her worse enemy could wish, and as if she could never take another natural step in her life. But she does. She struts out of the shop with little mincing steps as if she really were the goddess of Fashion herself."

"There is the painfully thin woman, who seems to be a bundle of bones, one of those who would think of a mirror that posed as a friend and yet would let this woman wear one of the new blouses with an exaggeratedly low V-cut neck, a blouse which brought into glaring prominence the poor timid bones, which if given the preference, would have hidden under the quiet seclusion of a not-to-thin tulle yoke? And—would you believe it?—the mirror actually let this woman, with her sharp, long-drawn-out face, wear the type earrings, not a single stone, fastened close to the ear, which would help to give just a suggestion of roundness to the face that needed it so badly—not a bit of it—but long inch-and-a-half drop earrings, the sole purpose of which, it would seem, was to drag every particle of flesh that they could discover."

"With her narrow tight skirt and her close-fitting, pointed hat, to say nothing of her earrings and low cut blouse, she starts forth with that delightful feeling of assurance and satisfaction which comes to a thin woman who knows she is fashionably dressed. If her object had been to look her very thinnest she could not have succeeded better. She was a study in angles."

In the September American Magazine appears under the title "A Hard Day with the Pen," confession of a man who is a professional writer of love letters, after-dinner speeches, obituary poetry, etc. The following is one of the stories he tells about writing love letters for a customer:

"One day a fat, old, bald-headed young man, much embarrassed, appeared, and after some hesitation confessed that he had neglected his education, and was corresponding with a young woman with whom he was very much in love. He was a college graduate, and he desired to have his letters, as well written as hers were; so he wanted me to write them. I advised him to write simply as he talked, but he persisted, and twice a week he came, furnished me concisely and briefly what he wanted to say to

Must Enforce Prohibitory Law at Fairs.

State Commissioner of Agriculture, John A. Roberts, sends Letter of Instructions to Managers.

State Commissioner of Agriculture, John A. Roberts, has sent a letter to the managers of the various fairs receiving State aid, calling attention to the law requiring rigid enforcement of the prohibitory law at all fairs, and declaring his desire that all cooperate in this.

The letter, which the commissioner states is not a threat, but is written in compliance with his duty as an official, is based upon Sections 11 and 15 of Chapter 60, the clause in Sec. 14 providing that "all agricultural societies receiving aid from the state by special act of the legislature, shall cause the prohibitory law to be enforced on all grounds over which they have control and not allow immoral shows, gambling in any form or games of chance on said grounds."

The commissioner's letter reads as follows:—

"I desire that your officers shall consider carefully the provisions in section 14, that all agricultural societies receiving aid from the state shall cause the prohibitory liquor law to be enforced on all grounds over which they have control and not allow immoral shows, gambling in any form or games of chance on said grounds; and also the further provision in section 14 which requires a certificate from the commissioner of agriculture that the provisions in regard to immoral shows, gambling and the sale of intoxicating liquors have been strictly complied with."

I desire that you take special notice of the language requiring this law to be strictly complied with. The State treasurer will not pay the stipend to any society until he receives such a certificate from the commissioner.

"Under the law requiring it, the commissioner, personally or by his representative, will visit each fair held in the State, to see if information first hand as to what the fair is doing, as to whether the legal regulations mentioned above are properly being enforced; as to whether the management is trying to promote the interests of agriculture or is letting the fair drift into a mere catch penny show. In a word, to ascertain whether the work done by your fair is worthy of the countenance and assistance of the State."

For the Children

Happy Young Bather on the Beach at Rockaway.

With the return of the summer sun the various beaches in the vicinity of New York are thronged with young and old enjoying a dip in the surf. After Coney Island, Rockaway Beach is the most popular seaside resort. Here any day during the summer may be seen hundreds of little ones playing in the sand. Trainloads of the poor children from the east side are taken daily to Rockaway, where they are provided with lunches. Some of them are kept for a week's outing, there being several large charitable institutions at the beach that provide accommodations. The youngster in the picture is making the most of his opportunity, and if expression counts for anything, is having a good time. The photo man caught him just as he came out of the water.

The Bird Catcher.

This is good fun for children, and even these of larger growth have been known to take part in it.

You must first decide which one is to be the bird catcher. The others each choose the name of a bird, but no one must choose the owl, as it is forbidden. All of the players then sit in a circle with their hands on their knees except the bird catcher, who stands in the center and tells a tale about birds, taking care to mention the ones he knows have been chosen by the company.

As each bird's name is spoken the owner must imitate its note as well as he can, but when the owl is named all hands must be put behind the chairs in silence and remain there until the next bird's name is mentioned.

When the bird catcher cries "all the birds" the players must altogether give their imitations of the various birds they have chosen. Should any player fail to give the cry when his bird is named or forget to put his hands behind his chair when the owl is mentioned he has to change places with the bird catcher.

Lawn Bubble Party.

A tennis net is desirable for this amusement. The net may be decorated with flags or ribbons or colored paper, just to add to its gay appearance.

Girls range themselves on one side of the net, boys on the other, or they may play as partners.

The hostess provides a bowl of soapy water, to which a tablespoonful of glycerin is added to contribute to the beauty of the prismatic colors, and clay pipes tied with ribbons, the color determining the sides.

The girls blow the bubbles, and the boys blow them over the net from their side to prevent the airy balls from floating into their domain. Each bubble that succeeds in floating over the net counts fifteen points for the side from which it came.

Competition may take other forms, as the largest bubble, the one retaining its form the longest or the longest chain of bubbles winning a prize. Ornamental pipes, fancy soap boxes filled with "bonbons" and similar trifles are suitable for prizes.

Great Shadows.

From the summit of Mount Diablo, in California, may be seen a curious phenomenon. Four times a year—once every three months—the sun rises at such an angle that a shadow over ten miles long is thrown on the plain beneath. The peak of Tenerife projects a huge shadow, stretching upward of fifty miles across the deep and partly eclipsing the adjoining isles.

Music Hath Charms.

Husband (to wife, who has begun to sing) upon his refusal to buy her a gown)—Remember, Tim, that I am not to be moved by violence from my determination.

Wife—My dear, I am only soothing the savage. Fillegende Blatter.

Thirty Years Ago This Week.
"Some Far-etched Truths and Fancies by One of Them," appeared in this issue. It was known as the Columbus, Ohio letter and caused something of a flutter among the good people of Norway and came near ruining the shining prospects of this paper.

The late Geo. A. Cole with both fists clinched jumped in the air and exclaimed in language, unique and forcible that it "was the truth every word of it" and therein was the damage and we were a fool for printing it and forthwith threatened to stop his paper and drive such a brainless idiot from town to larger and more congenial fields.

Uncle John L. Horne talked considerably and sincerely regretted the mistake made and as was his custom suggested a sensible remedy and Henry Beards was sour and morose and passed on the other side of the street but later on said "I guessed the town would live through it" while Chas. B. Cummings from the goodness of his heart came in and laughed, joked and told stories that cheered us.

He considered the publishing of the article was a mistake and we'd lose some subscribers but if we handled it right and show penitence we wouldn't be severely punished, only just a little which we deserved. He didn't threaten to stop his paper or withdraw his patronage—which was a good deal at that time—and he lamented that others would be so foolish over a little thing "which was true" but should not have been spread broadcast to the world. It was a mistake that's all.

We confidentially told Charles that up to that time no one had gone further than to threaten withdrawing their patronage and Mr. Cummings seemed pleased. Maybe we told him we had several new subscribers and perhaps named the late Wm. A. Mattoon of Norway and David N. True of South Paris as subscribing and complimenting us on the kind of paper we were running. Couldn't say as to that now.

The book then kept now shows in the days following the publishing of the Columbia letter we enrolled 21 new subscribers and no name was dropped, but we did get a good bit of tongue lashing and bruising from the first families in Norway.

Bovina Center, N.Y.—"For six years I have not had as good health as I have now. I was very young when my first baby was born and my health was very bad after that. I was not regular and I had pains in my back and was so poorly that I could hardly take care of my two children. I doctored with several doctors but got no better. They told me there was no help without an operation. I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has helped me wonderfully. I do most of my own work now and take care of my children. I recommend your remedies to all suffering women."—Mrs. WILLARD A. GRAHAM, Care of ELSWORTH TUTTLE, Bovina Center, N.Y.
